Excerpt: .action and becomes simply a generator, stationary armature and revolving field. The motor, whose armature is still connected with the driving shaft, receives current from this generator and drives the car either forward or backward, according to the relation of its field and armature connection. Under these conditions the system is simply a motor dynamo combination, but as reversing is only necessary for short distances at low speeds, this is amply sufficient, and is much simpler mechanically than the use of a reversing gear, although the latter may be used when it is desired, as in railway service, to have equal capacity and efficiency for running in either direction. In connection with the control an electric brake is provided, and there is also a connection between one of the foot brakes and a small short-circuiting switch, by means of which the field of the generator is short circuited when the brake is applied. This immediately stops generation and answers exactly the same purpose as throwing out the friction clutch on an ordinary car upon the application of the brake; so that, to bring the car to a standstill, it is only necessary to put on the brake. It should be noted that in order to establish any current in the circuit of the generator it is necessary that there should be a slight slip between the field and the armature; in other words, the engine should run slightly faster than the driving shaft to...
