Excerpt: . . . 11 in sport was examined, Gill (1992) found three different reasons: competitiveness, win orientation and goal orientation. Girls seem to be higher in goal orientation or the desire to achieve personal goals while boys seem to be more motivated by win-ning. Many girls prefer activities that allow them to work together to improve, or to function cooperatively to accomplish goals (Jaffee and Manzer, 1992), rather than competitive activities such as physical fitness testing (Wiese-Bjornstal, 1997). It is therefore important to structure daily physical activity experiences to provide moti-vation for children who have both goal and win orientations. During adolescence there appears to emerge a gender difference such that girls rely on adults and their own self-comparisons, while boys seem to rely more on com-petitive outcomes, their ability to learn new skills and their own egocentric judg-ments of physical competence (Weiss and Ebbeck, 1996). These differences suggest the important role of parents, teachers and coaches in influencing girls attitudes toward participation. Participation in sport and physical activity has a positive effect on emotional well-being. Children who are depressed or having emotional problems benefit from in-creased levels of physical activity (Biddle, 1995), with benefits reported to lower lev-els of depression (Morgan, 1994) and general anxiety (Landers and Petruzzello, 1994). The effects of participation in an active life style may have both a beneficial treat-ment effect,...
