Not illustrated. 1908 Excerpt: . . . as of a nearer relation, and going more naturally together; the Commentators being certainly mistaken, who would have a Metonymie in this place. The third Verse I can scarce believe legitimate: the words speak nothing but motion, and the numbers are so ratling 35 that nothing can be more repugnant to the general repose and silence which the Poet describes; or, if any Copies might favour the conjecture, I should rather read, cum medio librantur sydera cursu. For nothing can be more Poetical, than to suppose the Stars rest (as it were poizd) in their Meridian; and this 5 would not only express it to be Midnight, but heighten the Poets design, which by the common reading is absolutely destroyd. The fifth line seems to bear a doubtful face, and looks not unlike something of equivocation: an ordinary Grammarian would seek no further than the 10...
